Two men shot to death in west-end apartment

INVESTIGATION Two males were shot to death in the lobby area of a west-end highrise apartment building late yesterday afternoon.

Police said last night that they are investigating a double homicide at 1435 Prince of Wales Dr.

The incident occurred inside the apartment building at 5:30 p.m. One male was pronounced deceased at the scene and another male was taken to the hospital where he succumbed to his injuries. Police have not identified the two males.

No one has been arrested, said Ottawa Police Const.Al Boucher.

"We don't know if they are the only two involved or not."

Boucher said there were shots fired. The area around the building was cordoned off, but residents with identification were allowed back into the building by the evening, he said.

There was no more information at press time.

Police are advising anyone with information to contact the Major Crimes Section at 613-236-1222 ext. 5493 or Crime Stoppers at 613-233-8477 (TIPS).

CANTLEY MRC des Collines police arrested four men after a botched home invasion in Cantley early yesterday morning.

At 2 a.m., four male suspects knocked on the door of a residence at des Erables Road, said MRC des Collines Const. Martin Fournel.

"Obviously, the people inside were sleeping," said Fournel.

The 19-year-old male resident moved the blinds to see who it was, and when he saw the four men, he ran back to his bedroom and grabbed a pellet gun, Fournel said.

The four people at the door, who were allegedly trying to break into the home through the window, fled in a red car when they saw the man return with the pellet gun.

There were no injuries. In the meantime, the girlfriend of the male resident had called the police, Fournel said.

On his way to the scene, one of the responding officers spotted the vehicle at the Ultramar at the Alonzo-Wright Bridge in Gatineau, about three kilometres away from the scene, said Fournel.

He arrested four males — two from Gatineau, one from Ottawa and one from Chelsea, all between the ages of 19 and 25 — without incident.

Fournel said one of the individuals allegedly tried to dispose of a small number of ecstasy pills and a retractable stick after the officer arrived.

"They are all detained and will probably face charges of break and enter," said Fournel. "One of them will face charges of possession of drugs.

"We don't believe it's random, but the reason is not known."

Pair of armed robberies may be linked, police say

CRIME Gatineau police are now eyeing the same suspect in two armed robberies that targeted two convenience stores earlier this week.

At around 12:15 p.m. on Tuesday, a man entered the Couche-Tard at 790 Wilfrid Lavigne Bvd. and demanded cash.

"He asked for money in English," said Gatineau Police Constable Isabelle Poirier. The man also allegedly had a firearm, she said.

The man is believed to have fled on foot with approximately $100.

On Wednesday at 2:30 p.m., an armed man entered the Depanneur Lucerne at 15 Lucerne Bvd., demanded cash in English

Officials say several terrorists were captured alive

India remains on high alert today as investigators, joined by terrorism experts from around the world, strive to learn more about the shadowy group of terrorists who attacked a series of symbolic, highprofile targets in the country's financial capital of Mumbai.

The gunmen, identified by officials as suspected Muslim militants, attacked five-star hotels the Taj Mahal and Trident-Oberoi, along with the headquarters of an ultra-orthodox Iewish outreach group, Chabad Lubavitch, and a railway station.

Several terrorists were captured alive, according to Indian officials.

India's Prime Minister Manmohan Singh blamed "external" forces — code for Pakistani militants for the violence.

But Pakistan's government, which condemned the attacks, warned India against jumping to conclusions about who was responsible.

Survivors and witnesses say the gunmen went around specifically looking for American and British citizens in the attacks,

Who to blame still India looks for answers

Officials say several terrorists were captured alive

India remains on high alert today as investigators, joined by terrorism experts from around the world, strive to learn more about the shadowy group of terrorists who attacked a series of symbolic, highprofile targets in the country's financial capital of Mumbai.

The gunmen, identified by officials as suspected Muslim militants, attacked five-star hotels the Taj Mahal and Trident-Oberoi, along with the headquarters of an ultra-orthodox Iewish outreach group, Chabad Lubavitch, and a railway station.

Several terrorists were captured alive, according to Indian officials.

India's Prime Minister Manmohan Singh blamed "external" forces — code for Pakistani militants for the violence.

But Pakistan's government, which condemned the attacks, warned India against jumping to conclusions about who was responsible.

Survivors and witnesses say the gunmen went around specifically looking for American and British citizens in the attacks,

Last night a team of FBI bomb and forensics experts left Los Angeles for Mumbai to help with the investigation, even as analysts around the world were debating whether the gunmen — described as young and ordinary — could have been linked to al-Qaida.

The game of year-end predictions ack before too much work and parenting-induced penury reduced both free time and spare cash, I used to read at least 40 magazines a month. Everything from fluffy lifestyle mags to foreign policy journals, they were the meat of my regular reading, much more so than newspapers. These days, there's a scant few I pick up regularly, and most of these end up barely scanned before ending up in a bin in the living room, waiting for those leisurely weekends that won't come until my daughters are in college.

One of the few remaining titles I pick up regularly is The Economist's glossy annual exercise in prognostication, and this year's edition — the authoritatively-titled World In 2009 — hit the newsstands this week. Like its predecessors, it's thick with essays, all confidently delivered, telling us to expect more bad economic news in the year to come,

The (Economist's The World In) 2008 issue predicted that "record rates of mortgage defaults and repossessions will be the most visible symbol of a deepening housing bust," an oraculation that can be faulted not so much for its accuracy as its timidity.

with global workforces shrinking with age, Iran edging ever closer to a nuclear bomb, and luxury brands taking a beating. It'll get picked at for the next month or so, after which it'll end up on a shelf, next to The World In 2008, 2007, 2006 and so on.

I hold on to these issues as keepsakes of the conventional wisdom, collected and codified on the eve of largely arbitrary turnover of another calendar year, since they often prove to be poor almanacs for the year to come. According to The World In 2008 for instance, Hillary Clinton was the likely bet to lead the Democrats into the White House, since "both Mr. Obama and Mr. Edwards come across as too lightweight." Time, of course, may prove if even a wrong prediction might still contain a kernel of insight.

The 2008 issue predicted that "record rates of mortgage defaults and repossessions will be the most visible symbol of a deepening housing bust," an oraculation that can be faulted not so much for its accuracy as its timidity. from "political continuity; balanced budgets; strong economic growth: Where's the catch?" It seems so long ago now.

There's barely a mention of terrorism in The World In 2001, which set the tone for that year with an editorial essay summing up the economic bounty we could expect in the year to come: "Nerve-wracking it may be, but this is surely a golden age," wrote Clive Crook, the magazine's deputy editor. 'Walkability' by numbers

It might not be evident to those sloshing through the slush past Metro's Slater Street offices, but they're trudging through a "walker's paradise."

according This, walkscore.com, a website that rates a neighbourhood's "walkability" on a scale of 0 to 100 by tallying up the number of restaurants, parks, schools, drug stores, pubs and other destinations within walking distance of any address you provide.

Walk Score asks you to "picture a walkable neighbourhood. You lose weight each time you walk to the grocery store. You stumble home from last call without waiting for a cab. You spend less money on your car — or you don't own a car. When you shop, you support your local economy. You talk to your neighbours."

Burning more shoe leather and less fossil fuel is good for your health, your wallet, the environment and on and on, but it's not so easy in suburbs built around the car, the big box mall and the multi-lane freeway. Metro's downtown 'hood, close to amenities and far enough from Queensway, scores 90 out of 100 for walkability.

UrbanCompass

Another rough guide to your neighbourhood's walkability is the "Popsicle test" generally formulated as whether an eight-year-old can walk to the store without crossing major roads, buy a Popsicle and then get home before it melts.

There are flaws in Walk Score's methodology, too. Punch in the address of Hartman's Your Independent Grocer and you'll get a happy-feet rating of 92. Anybody who's tried to traverse the torn up crudscape that is Bank Street in recent months, let alone navigate it with a stroller or a wheelchair, might beg to differ.

Walk Score lists some of the key walkability factors not taken into account by the site's calculations, like proximity to public transit, shorter blocks (which offer more choice of routes to a destination) and narrower streets (slower traffic).

Still, it's hard to resist playing. The environs of Ottawa City Hall are rated a "very walkable" 83. Not so much Barrhaven councillor Jan Harder's ward office, in the Walter Baker Centre on Malvern Drive, which gets a 'car-dependant" 45.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper, who has striven to get more exercise, is hardly helped by living at 24 Sussex Drive, to which Walk Score gives a rating of 30.

Walk Score is addictive and eye-opening, but the best way to find out how walkable your neighbourhood is, is to walk it. Get a soaker, get a second glance, get hit up for spare change.

If you get outside and find there's nowhere to go, start asking why.

Hungry U.S. retailers lure in Canadians with big sales

With U.S. consumers in a funk, retailers south of the border have stepped up efforts to lure Canadians into their stores and websites today for "Black Friday," the busiest shopping days on the American calendar.

But they could be in for a tough fight. Canadian retailers are striking back with deeper discounts, longer store hours and new catchphrases such as The Brick's "Red Day," to instil thoughts of U.S.-style Thanksgiving savings in consumers' minds.

Some Canadian retailers, such as Sears, are even going so far as to say they're offering Boxing Day-style savings this weekend.

Darrel Ryce with The NPD Group has noticed Canadian retailers making an effort to hold onto their customers. "I think a lot of it has to do with getting the dollar out of that person's wallet now, before they spend it somewhere else."

"Maybe we can get some Canadians to come in and spend some money."

On the U.S. side, where retail sales have fallen dramatically in recent months, mall owners were offering free $20 US gift certificates, or advertising U.S. Thanksgiving deals in Canadian newspapers.

Ryce explains the rationale: "If Americans are not going to spend as much, maybe we can get some Canadians to come in and spend some money."

The company said it would also encourage customers to use alternatives to plastic bags and enhance its offer of affordable reusable-bag options, including its own line of reusable fabric bags, sold for a small fee.

Senators take shootout win

NHL RESULT

Leafs 1 Sens 2 (SO)

MIKE BEASLEY

THE SKINNY: The Battle of Ontario added another chapter to its ongoing saga last night at Scotiabank Place in Ottawa as the Senators edged the Toronto Maple Leafs in a shootout.

THE WINNER: Daniel Alfredsson beat Leafs goalie Vesa Toskala with a quick shot over the netminder's glove hand in the shootout for the win.

Ottawa's Jason Spezza dekes around Toronto's Jeff Finger last night at the Scotiabank Place. The Senators ended up beating the Maple Leafs 2-1 in a shootout.

THE QUOTE: "We haven't had much luck in shootouts ... so it's a big bonus to win like we did," said Alfredsson.

THE FIRST TWO TALLIES:

Ottawa's Mike Fisher and the Leafs Nikolai Kulemin traded goals 59 seconds apart in the first five minutes of the opening period. That was the goal scoring for the game until Alfredsson notched the winner.

THE RIVALRY: Both teams left everything on the ice last night as they pounded each other for the entire 65 minutes, combining for over 50 hits. The game even featured a spirited second period dust-up between Toronto forward Dominic Moore and Sens blue-liner Jason Smith.

MILESTONE FOR

TOSKALA: Toronto's Finnishborn goalie made 34 saves last night in regulation and overtime as he played in his 200th NHL career game and 85th as a member of the Toronto Maple Leafs.

THE NEXT GAME: The Senators will be on Long Island tomorrow night to face the Islanders at Nassau Veterans Memorial Coliseum

New film shows how soccer helps Afghan women

DOCUMENTARY Hope, confidence and a bit of freedom to have fun are the themes of an uplifting new documentary film from Afghanistan by an Iranian filmmaker.

Bahareh Hosseini's Afghan Girls Can Kick follows Afghanistan's first national women's soccer team as they prepare for their first matches abroad in Pakistan and talk about how their passion for the game is helping them move on from the days when their rights and freedoms were heavily restricted.

The movie shows how the team and the beautiful game has provided an outlet for girls previously deprived of sports and education under the hardline Islamist rule of the Taliban.

'We want to show the whole world the ability of an Afghan woman, the things they can do," team captain Shamila Kohestani said during an interview in the film.

The Taliban banned women from leaving the home without a male relative when they were in power from 1996 until 2001. Girls could not play outdoors and sport was out of the question.

Coach says Kobe's a we-we' kind of guy

bscured by the fact that the Los Angeles Lakers have catapulted to a remarkable, NBA-best 12-1 start is Kobe Bryant's slump.

Yep, production by the Lakers' marquee player is down across the board. Yet the Lakers are winning, and usually by huge margins.

"Kobe seems to understand now that if it's not his night, he has to help the other guys play well," Lakers coach Phil Jackson told me yesterday. "He's become more of a we-we guy and less of a me-me guy.'

• The Lakers' crosstown rivals, meanwhile, are performing in a diametrically opposed fashion.

The Clippers, perennial dregs, are 2-12, and they're already planning to shake up their roster. They're even willing to trade their top offseason acquisition —former Toronto Raptor Marcus Camby.

• Quarterback Michael Vick, completing his sentence for mistreating dogs, is keeping in first-rate shape in prison and plans to formally apply soon for reinstatement with the NFL and the Atlanta Falcons.

The Falcons, however.

don't want him back and there's widespread speculation that, despite his exceptional talents, NFL clubs will stay away from him.

Which raises the question: Could Vick wind up in the CFL?

"Anyone who wants Michael better be prepared to face the dog lovers of America," Kansas City Chiefs general manager Carl Peterson said. "There'll be a lot of problems. People love their pets, and particularly dogs. There'll be protests, people expressing their thoughts — even though he's served his time. And that goes for Canada, too."

Besides Tampa Bay, clubs pursuing him include the Toronto Maple Leafs, Ottawa Senators, Vancouver Canucks, Montreal Canadiens, Philadelphia Flyers, Chicago Blackhawks, New York Rangers, New York Islanders and Anaheim Ducks.

Coach says Kobe's a we-we' kind of guy

bscured by the fact that the Los Angeles Lakers have catapulted to a remarkable, NBA-best 12-1 start is Kobe Bryant's slump.

14 sports

Yep, production by the Lakers' marquee player is down across the board. Yet the Lakers are winning, and usually by huge margins.

"Kobe seems to understand now that if it's not his night, he has to help the other guys play well," Lakers coach Phil Jackson told me yesterday. "He's become more of a we-we guy and less of a me-me guy.'

• The Lakers' crosstown rivals, meanwhile, are performing in a diametrically opposed fashion.

The Clippers, perennial dregs, are 2-12, and they're already planning to shake up their roster. They're even willing to trade their top offseason acquisition —former Toronto Raptor Marcus Camby.

• Quarterback Michael Vick, completing his sentence for mistreating dogs, is keeping in first-rate shape in prison and plans to formally apply soon for reinstatement with the NFL and the Atlanta Falcons.

The Falcons, however.

don't want him back and there's widespread speculation that, despite his exceptional talents, NFL clubs will stay away from him.

Which raises the question: Could Vick wind up in the CFL?

"Anyone who wants Michael better be prepared to face the dog lovers of America," Kansas City Chiefs general manager Carl Peterson said. "There'll be a lot of problems. People love their pets, and particularly dogs. There'll be protests, people expressing their thoughts — even though he's served his time. And that goes for Canada, too."

 Although kicker Sandro DeAngelis is commanding

• A new offer for megabucks has been made to NHL free agent Mats Sundin, who likely will narrow his list of possibilities to three teams next week. He's eyeing a January return. Besides Tampa Bay, clubs pursuing him include the Toronto Maple Leafs, Ottawa Senators, Vancouver Canucks, Montreal Canadiens, Philadelphia Flyers, Chicago Blackhawks, New York Rangers, New York Islanders and Anaheim Ducks.

And I only have one word about the Leafs' decision to hire the irascible Brian Burke as club bossman: Why?

Universal has a Best Man-A-Thon

And the nominees are ...

Who deserves to win during the upcoming award season

While most people are thinking about the holidays at this time of year, Hollywood is thinking about statues and accolades.

The annual award season is about to kick off, with Golden Globe nominations being handed down in mid-December, and Oscar predictions already being made.

Metro asked its movie reviewers — Richard Crouse, Steve Gow, Chris Alexander and Rick McGinnis — to weigh-in on who they think deserves props this year.

Best actress

CROUSE: Anne Hathaway's intense, unvarnished performance in Rachel Getting Married reveals the pain that lurks beneath the character's goth-like exterior. She's tough and fragile; someone who is able to live with past sins, but can't get over them. It's the award caliber performance she has hinted at before but never delivered.

ALEXANDER: Angelina Jolie for Changeling or Meryl Streep for Doubt. Good movies, and blistering performances in both films.

MCGINNIS: If Kate Winslet gets nominated for both The Reader and Revolutionary Road, it's not hard to see how she won't blow past Keira Knightley or Nicole Kidman.

Best actor

ALEXANDER: It needs to go to my favorite underdog, Mickey Rourke, in The Wrestler. Will it? Maybe ... Hollywood loves comebacks. By that same token, I hold a special place in my heart for Jean-Claude Van Damme in JCVD. It won't happen but, man, was he good.

GOW: Frank Langella for Frost/Nixon. After winning the Tony Award for playing this role on Broadway, the 70-year-old screen legend is due to make his mark in cinema as well. Besides, with a film career that goes back 38 years, he's owed a statuette or two.

MCGINNIS: Playing gay is the way to go — just ask Tom Hanks — and Leonardo DiCaprio doesn't have a lot of love these days, so let's call it for Sean Penn in Milk.

Best director

CROUSE: Slumdog Millionaire is Danny Boyle's most complex movie yet, encompassing everything from romance to action, comedy to anguish, treachery, greed and yes, even a musical number (stay through the credits). It's a wild ride featuring Boyle's hyper visual style.

ALEXANDER: Chris Nolan redefined the parameters of mainstream pulp cinema with The Dark Knight, but I also adore the great Darren Aronofsky for The Wrestler. He deserves every accolade he gets.

Best picture

CROUSE: WALL-E is the first art film for kids I have ever seen. The story of a lonely robot that inadvertently gives humankind a second chance is aimed at children but doesn't look like any other kid's movie you've seen. It's 2001: A Space Odyssey for children.

Gow: Slumdog Millionaire. This dark horse may surprise a few folks, but certainly not those who have seen it. Crowds have been going wild for it and if it

Wild card

CROUSE: (best supporting actor) Heath Ledger's Joker in The Dark Knight is a super villain for the new millennium; a terrorist, more interested in creating chaos than in anything else.

from Brussels to the sanctuary of Belgium where he soon finds himself in the middle of a robberygone-wrong. While cops mistakenly accuse the star of an escalating hostage situation, Van Damme struggles with the elements that have steered him to bizarre crossroads.

With a slick, stylish and unabashed approach, it's that director clear Mabrouk El-Mechri both reveres and roasts his former movie idol. Better yet, El-Mechri gives him the soapbox on which to tell his story.

And Van Damme is the real deal here. With disarming likeability, he casts a spell over his audience with a compelling mix of self-parody and sentimentality.

JCVD isn't just an amazing turnabout for Van Damme; it's a fascinating and hilarious study of celebrity and middle-aged angst at large.

While Van Damme may stun audiences with a dramatic dropkick, wouldn't go so far as to forecast that JCVD will restore the actor to the A-his year may go down in the history books as the year politics became hip again. Barack Obama's "Yes we can!" vigor reignited America's political passion, helping to break a fortyyear-old Election Day turnout record and actually get people under the age of seventy to tune into Meet the Press.

That excitement has infected Hollywood as well. This year sees three high profile political biographies hit theatres: W., about the life and wild times of George W. Bush; the soon-to-be released Frost/Nixon; and this week's limited release Milk, starring Sean Penn as the first openly gay man elected to public office in Hollywood has often looked to politics for inspiration. Anthony Hopkins's portrayal of rubbercheeked Tricky Dicky in Nixon was nominated for a Best Actor Oscar, as was Raymond Massey's take on the 16th president in Abe Lincoln in Illinois, and James Whitmore as Harry Truman in Give 'em Hell, Harry.

Not all political movies earn Oscar consideration, but that doesn't mean they aren't entertaining. Wild in the Streets, a 1968 counter-culture cult film about Max Frost, a multimillionaire rock star with plans to take over the government, is one of the wilder political "what-if" films.

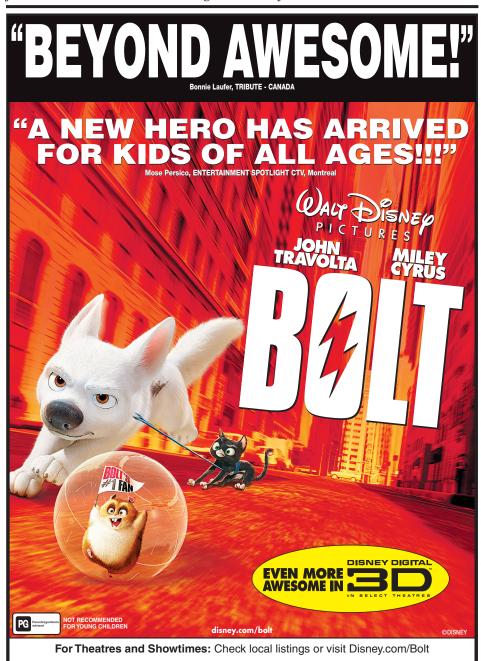

Frost's scheme begins with staged riots on the Sunset Strip. Next he spikes Washington's drinking water supply with LSD and while D.C.'s powerbrokers are hallucinating he gets them to pass a law lowering the age limit for all elected offices to 14. Soon he wins the Oval Office, immediately imprisoning everyone over 30 in concentration camps where they wear dark robes and are perpetually stoned on LSD.

Seen through today's eyes the film is little more than a fun, druggy artifact from the freewheeling sixties, but at the time its message was taken seriously by some. At 1968's Presidential Convention the Mayor of Chicago hired security to protect the city's water supply from being laced with LSD.

Other unconventional political films include Whoops Apocalypse which sees America's first female president, played M*A*S*H's Loretta Swit, try to avoid World War III. Kisses for My President, released in 1964, focuses on the tough job of First Husband as he puts a masculine spin on the role of First Lady, hosting women's groups and garden parties.

Richard Crouse is the author of Son of the film critic for CTV's Canada AM.

Hollywood has often looked to politics for inspiration. Anthony Hopkins's portrayal of rubbercheeked Tricky Dicky in Nixon was nominated for a Best Actor Oscar, as was Raymond Massey's take on the 16th president in Abe Lincoln in Illinois, and James Whitmore as Harry Truman in Give 'em Hell, Harry.

Not all political movies earn Oscar consideration, but that doesn't mean they aren't entertaining. Wild in the Streets, a 1968 counter-culture cult film about Max Frost, a multimillionaire rock star with plans to take over the government, is one of the wilder political "what-if" films.

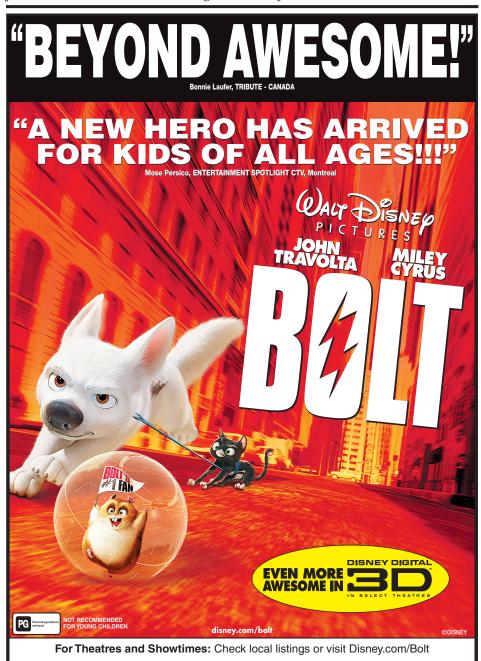

Frost's scheme begins with staged riots on the Sunset Strip. Next he spikes Washington's drinking water supply with LSD and while D.C.'s powerbrokers are hallucinating he gets them to pass a law lowering the age limit for all elected offices to 14. Soon he wins the Oval Office, immediately imprisoning everyone over 30 in concentration camps where they wear dark robes and are perpetually stoned on LSD.

Seen through today's eyes the film is little more than a fun, druggy artifact from the freewheeling sixties, but at the time its message was taken seriously by some. At 1968's Presidential Convention the Mayor of Chicago hired security to protect the city's water supply from being laced with LSD.

Other unconventional political films include Whoops Apocalypse which sees America's first female president, played M*A*S*H's Loretta Swit, try to avoid World War III. Kisses for My President, released in 1964, focuses on the tough job of First Husband as he puts a masculine spin on the role of First Lady, hosting women's groups and garden parties.

Richard Crouse is the author of Son of the film critic for CTV's Canada AM.

I'm for the company that has more 2009 hybrid models than anyone in the industry.

I'm for affordable hybrids.

I'm for reinvention: the plug-in extended-range electric car – the Chevrolet Volt.

I'm for the company that won North American Car of the Year* in 2007 and 2008.

I'm for the company that won AJAC Award – Best New Small Car in 2008 and 2009.

I'm for the winner of the 2008 Green Car of the Year¹.

I'm for the company that does more research & development in Canada than the rest of its competitors combined.

I'm for the company that offers more vehicles with 7 L/100 km (40 mpg) or better highway fuel economy.

I'm for the company that sold the most small cars of any automaker in Canada (more than Toyota, Honda, Mazda and Nissan in 2007).

I'm for the company that has changed.

Music notes for Christmas

t's Black Friday in America, the traditional start of the full-contact holiday shopping frenzy. Even though for most Canadians it's just another day at work, the thought of working through the Christmas lists has no doubt begun to inspire that familiar mix of dread and nausea.

But I'm here to help. I've always been a big giver of books because I believe people need to read more. Feel free to tear out this page and use it as a shopping list.

Late actor Heath Ledger's tragic death has reportedly inspired a new episode of U.S. TV crime drama Law & Order. Ledger died from a prescription drug overdose in January. IMDB.COM

Viewership on the up and up — well, duh

Rick McGinnis rick.mcginnis@metronews.ca

FIRST THE GOOD NEWS: There are people who wouldn't consider it good news — I'm thinking of the nice but misguided souls behind TV Turnoff Week, or whatever they're calling it now — but as someone who can't see the downside of people getting more and more of their entertainment in the comfort of their homes, I was happy to read early this week that a new Nielsen study says that Americans are watching more TV than ever.

Gary Homes, spokesman for Nielsen, told the Los Angeles Times business section that part of the reason is that there are more TVs in homes now. "That means that little Suzie can watch Gossip Girl in her bedroom," the Times wrote, "while Mom watches Dancing with the Stars in the basement and Dad watches football in the den. There also are more and more niche channels, which means more people are interested in the shows currently on TV, (Homes) This said. year, the Olympics and the political campaigns brought a lot of people to TVs who wouldn't necessarily have been watching so much.

All of which falls into the "duh" category, though for some reason it's easier for me to get away with a whole evening in front of the tube these days than it was when I was a kid, and sent to psychiatrists who were obsessed with thenvoguish concerns about "TV addiction" and brain development. Maybe it's just because I'm the guy who pays for the TV these days — it's a good thing kids take years to learn about the benefits of property rights.

TV viewing on average us up about five hours a month from the same time last year, and time-shifted viewing is up 50 per cent, an increase that's likely to continue if the economy stays sour. Internet viewing is also on the rise, and will probably persist as consumers trim back on entertainment expenses. You can call file that news under obvious as well.

A more epochal sign of the times is the news that Fox, likely leading the pack as usual, is putting an end to Saturday morning cartoons, a TV programming institution since the dawn of the medium. Cable channels like Nickelodeon, Disney and the Cartoon Network, as well as Canadian networks such as YTV, Teletoon and Treehouse, have made the programming block obsolete, so Fox is turning it over to infomercials, and another cultural institution goes the way of late night movies, afterschool specials and Billy Graham on primetime.

Viewership on the up and up — well, duh

FIRST THE GOOD NEWS: There are people who wouldn't consider it good news — I'm thinking of the nice but misguided souls behind TV Turnoff Week, or whatever they're calling it now — but as someone who can't see the downside of people getting more and more of their entertainment in the comfort of their homes, I was happy to read early this week that a new Nielsen study says that Americans are watching more TV than ever.

Gary Homes, spokesman for Nielsen, told the Los Angeles Times business section that part of the reason is that there are more TVs in homes now. "That means that little Suzie can watch Gossip Girl in her bedroom," the Times wrote, "while Mom watches Dancing with the Stars in the basement and Dad watches football in the den. There also are more and niche channels, more which means more people are interested in the shows currently on TV, (Homes) This said. year, the Olympics and the political campaigns brought a lot of people to TVs who wouldn't necessarily have been watching so much.

All of which falls into the "duh" category, though for some reason it's easier for me to get away with a whole evening in front of the tube these days than it was when I was a kid, and sent to psychiatrists who were obsessed with thenvoguish concerns about "TV addiction" and brain development. Maybe it's just because I'm the guy who pays for the TV these days — it's a good thing kids take years to learn about the benefits of property rights.

TV viewing on average us up about five hours a month from the same time last year, and time-shifted viewing is up 50 per cent, an increase that's likely to continue if the economy stays sour. Internet viewing is also on the rise, and will probably persist as consumers trim back on entertainment expenses. You can call file that news under obvious as well.

A more epochal sign of the times is the news that Fox, likely leading the pack as usual, is putting an end to Saturday morning cartoons, a TV programming institution since the dawn of the medium. Cable channels like Nickelodeon, Disney and the Cartoon Network, as well as Canadian networks such as YTV, Teletoon and Treehouse, have made the programming block obsolete, so Fox is turning it over to infomercials, and another cultural institution goes the way of late night movies, afterschool specials and Billy Graham on primetime.

When Jason Priestley was a young actor, he always used to see the notification cards given to nominees of Gemini Awards — Canada's highest television honour. But he never got one.

"I realized it was because I always work in America and of course I never get nominated for Geminis," says the Vancouver-born actor/director. "I started making a much more concerted effort to work more in Canada, thinking that one day I'd get nominated for a Gemini," he says airily, looking into the distance.

And, in 2003, he finally did ... but he didn't win.

So when the event's organizers asked him to hand out an award at last year's ceremony, he didn't have to think twice. "Of course, I got on a plane and I flew to Regina and I presented an award at the Geminis. (I was) very excited to do that!" proclaims Priestley.

Now, five years later, Priestley will retire the 90210 zip code where he found fame as Brandon Walsh for M5V 2W6, the Metro Toronto Convention Centre, where he'll switch roles to host this year's awards. "This is my penultimate goal — hosting the Geminis. Every year, I feel like I'm just getting a little bit closer to my actual goal of actually winning a Gemini! Baby steps, you know what I mean?" he jokes.

It's not the first time the star has come home to host. In 1998, he emceed the Juno Awards — the nation's highest music honour. According to Priestley, his 10-year hosting hiatus has only benefited him.

"I'm 10 years older. I'm 10 pounds heavier. And that's going to make me 10 times better," he says, drawing laughs from his wife nearby.

But it wasn't Priestley's past awards experience that he believes drove Gemini organizers choice.

"Apparently everybody else was booked and they got to the bottom of the list, they saw Jason Priestley and said, 'Meh, let's take a shot," he says, mockingly. "Seriously. Deal or No Deal is five nights a week. Howie Mandel couldn't make it. Here I am!'

And for those more attuned to American shows like Mandel's over Canadian ones, Priestley says to watch the Gemini Awards, because you might be surprised by what you see.

"In one hour, you get to see a cross-section of the best in Canadian television and then, maybe something will spark with you and you'll go, 'Yeah, I'm going to put that on my PVR and I'll check it out later ... After I watch Jon Stewart."

When Jason Priestley was a young actor, he always used to see the notification cards given to nominees of Gemini Awards — Canada's highest television honour. But he never got one.

"I realized it was because I always work in America and of course I never get nominated for

And, in 2003, he finally did ... but he didn't win.

So when the event's organizers asked him to hand out an award at last year's ceremony, he didn't have to think twice. "Of course, I got on a plane and I flew to Regina and I presented an award at the Geminis. (I was) very excited to do that!" proclaims Priestley.

Now, five years later, Priestley will retire the 90210 zip code where he found fame as Brandon Walsh for M5V 2W6, the Metro Toronto Convention Centre, where he'll switch roles to host this year's awards. "This is my penultimate goal — hosting the Geminis. Every year, I feel like I'm just getting a little

Sausages with Spiced

Wine and Apples

Metro Recipe of the Day

INGREDIENTS:

1 1/4 cup (300 mL) dry white wine

1/2 lb (230g) pork or chicken sausages

1 shallot or 1/2 small onion

2 crisp dessert apples 5 tbsp (70g) butter, at room temperature 3/4 cup (175 mL) chicken or vegetable stock 2 tbsp (25 mL) light brown sugar

1/2 tsp (10 mL) ground cinnamon

METHOD:

1. Bring wine to boil in a large frying pan and poach sausages gently for 10 minutes.

2. Meanwhile, peel and grate shallot or onion; peel, quarter, core, and slice apples.

3. Gently melt small knob of butter in a second frying pan. Remove sausages from first pan, reserving wine. Discard loose skins and fry sausages slowly in butter until browned all over.

4. Meanwhile, add shallot or onion to white wine in first pan; with apples, stock, brown sugar, cinnamon and remaining butter. Bring mixture to boil, reduce heat and simmer until apples become tender and liquid is reduced to thin syrup. Serve with apple sauce. SERVES 2
